Article 1 To encourage students with outstanding academic achievements and versatility in each department, the College of Engineering (hereinafter referred to as “this College”) established the review guidelines according to the reward instructions issued by this university.

Article 2 Students from all departments of this College who meet the following requirements are eligible to apply for the Academic Awards:

1. Academic Gold Award: Students who have received first place in a national academic competition or first/second/third place or an award in an international academic competition. Undergraduate or graduate students who have their study or research results published or accepted for publication by reputable domestic or foreign journals (Category A journals). A paper can only be used once for this application. Only one author of the paper can file an application; for applications of two or more authors, the advisors must provide an explanation in the application form.
2. Academic Silver Award: Students who have received first/second/third place in intramural and extramural academic competitions. Undergraduate or graduate students who have their study or research results published or accepted for publication by reputable domestic or foreign journals (Category B journals). A paper can only be used once for this application. Only one author of the paper can file an application; for applications of two or more authors, the advisors must provide an explanation in the application form.
3. Academic Achievement Award: Students who have received two Academic Silver Awards or one Academic Gold Award and again qualify for the Academic Gold Award in the year of application.

Article 3 Students from all departments of this College who meet the following requirements are eligible to apply for the Versatility Awards:

1. Versatility Gold Award: Students who have passed the National Civil Service Senior Examination (or examinations of an equivalent level), received a National Technician Skills Class A Certification, or obtained an excellent English proficiency result (refer to the English Proficiency Tests and CEF Table for Award/Medal Application issued by this university).

2. Versatility Silver Award: Students who have passed the National Civil Service Junior Examination (or examinations of an equivalent level), received a National Technician Skills Class B Certification, or obtained an excellent English proficiency result (refer to the English Proficiency Tests and CEF Table for Award/Medal Application issued by this university).
3. Versatility Achievement Award: Students who have received two Versatility Silver Awards or one Versatility Gold Award and again qualify for the Versatility Gold Award in the year of application.

Article 4 Students who are qualified to apply can submit the following supporting documents provided by themselves or relevant units: study or research results, photocopies of papers published or accepted by domestic or foreign journals, competition results or awards of academic competitions, transcripts of the National Examinations, or Technician Skill Certifications. The application is to be submitted to the department to which the applicant belongs. Awardee selection is to be conducted by the Engineering College Affairs Meeting. Following result approval by the Student Affairs Meeting, the Award winners are to be announced by the Office of Student Affairs.

Article 5 An examination or certification result can only be used to apply for either the Gold or Silver Award. Only one Award is to be awarded for an application with multiple results submitted. The Achievement Awards are limited to the graduates of the current year.

Article 6 Award winners who have provided counterfactuals are to be disqualified through the same review procedures.

Article 7 The award winning record is to be registered in the award winner's Five Ways of Life record by the Office of Student Affairs.

Article 8 The guidelines and amendments herein are approved by the College Affairs Meeting and implemented following verification by the Student Affairs Meeting.
